XV THE DEVIL

The Devil card in the Tarot is considered one of the "scary" or "evil" cards of the deck by the uninitiated. This assumption is not based on knowledge of the Tarot, but rather on cultural bias that has been ingrained in those who have grown up in Christian dominated countries.

The cards, themselves, have many Christian influences, thus, the existence of a card titled after the Devil. Interpretations and depictions of this character vary widely, yet the essential theme is consistent as it is universal.

The Devil, a major arcana card, represents 1/22nd of the pie of life, the mandala of creation as we perceive it as human beings. We all face experiences and lessons that are tainted by the Devil's obstruction or delusion. This card challenges us by asking "What is your addictive tendency? What perception about yourself or life are you confined by? Where in your life are you not truly living or breathing?" Just remember, DEVIL spelled backwards is LIVED!
