THE BIBLICAL ROOTS OF TAROT

Have you ever heard someone express that Tarot cards are the work of the Devil? This may be because the Devil is the title of one of the cards in the major arcana of most decks. Did it cross your mind that the Devil is a concept unique to Christianity and thus reflects specific Christian values incorporated into the Tarot deck?

In contrast, the Sun arcana XIX, can represent the spirit of Christ, the son of God. When looking at the Arthur E. Waite deck the Lovers card looks like a scene out of the Garden of Eden story from Genesis in the Old Testament. In fact, each card in the major arcana reflects an aspect of the spiritual wisdom of the Bible, portrayed through Renaissance period European artistry.

According to Robert O'Neill from tarot.com the religious art and plays of the Renaissance period had a direct influence on the cards of the major arcana, as well as their sequence, as if characters in the procession of life.

To hear more about this fascinating history, plan to attend my talk at the BMSE, April 22 at 1 pm.

TRANSFORMATIVE TAROT COUNSELING™ CLASSES

Dream Class & Clinic

I often say to my students that Tarot is a ffvisual symbolic language.ff Understanding dream work enhances oneff skills to better perceive and integrate the more subtle messages in a card reading.

Dream material is subjective and very revealing about your clients inner knowing. It is useful to allow your clients to dream into their cards and then reflect this information back to them.

In the Dream Class we focus on the history and global styles of relating to the dream realm, such as the Dreamtime of the Aboriginal people of Australia.

We also cover traditional western psychological and analytical techniques for exploring dream material. Several handouts are offered with a multitude of ways to approach oneff dreams.

Process Work, developed by Dr. Arnold Mindell, has contributed a significant piece to modern dream work. In the Dream Clinic we utilize his techniques for actualizing a dream to reveal hidden messages and powers.

Each student is invited to bring a dream to explore in the safe and professional environment of the Dream Clinic. No dream is too scary or weird! Students are always amazed at the healing power of their own subconscious mind.
